Next we look at the different ages quoted in census returns for the selected areas and the number of persons for that age.

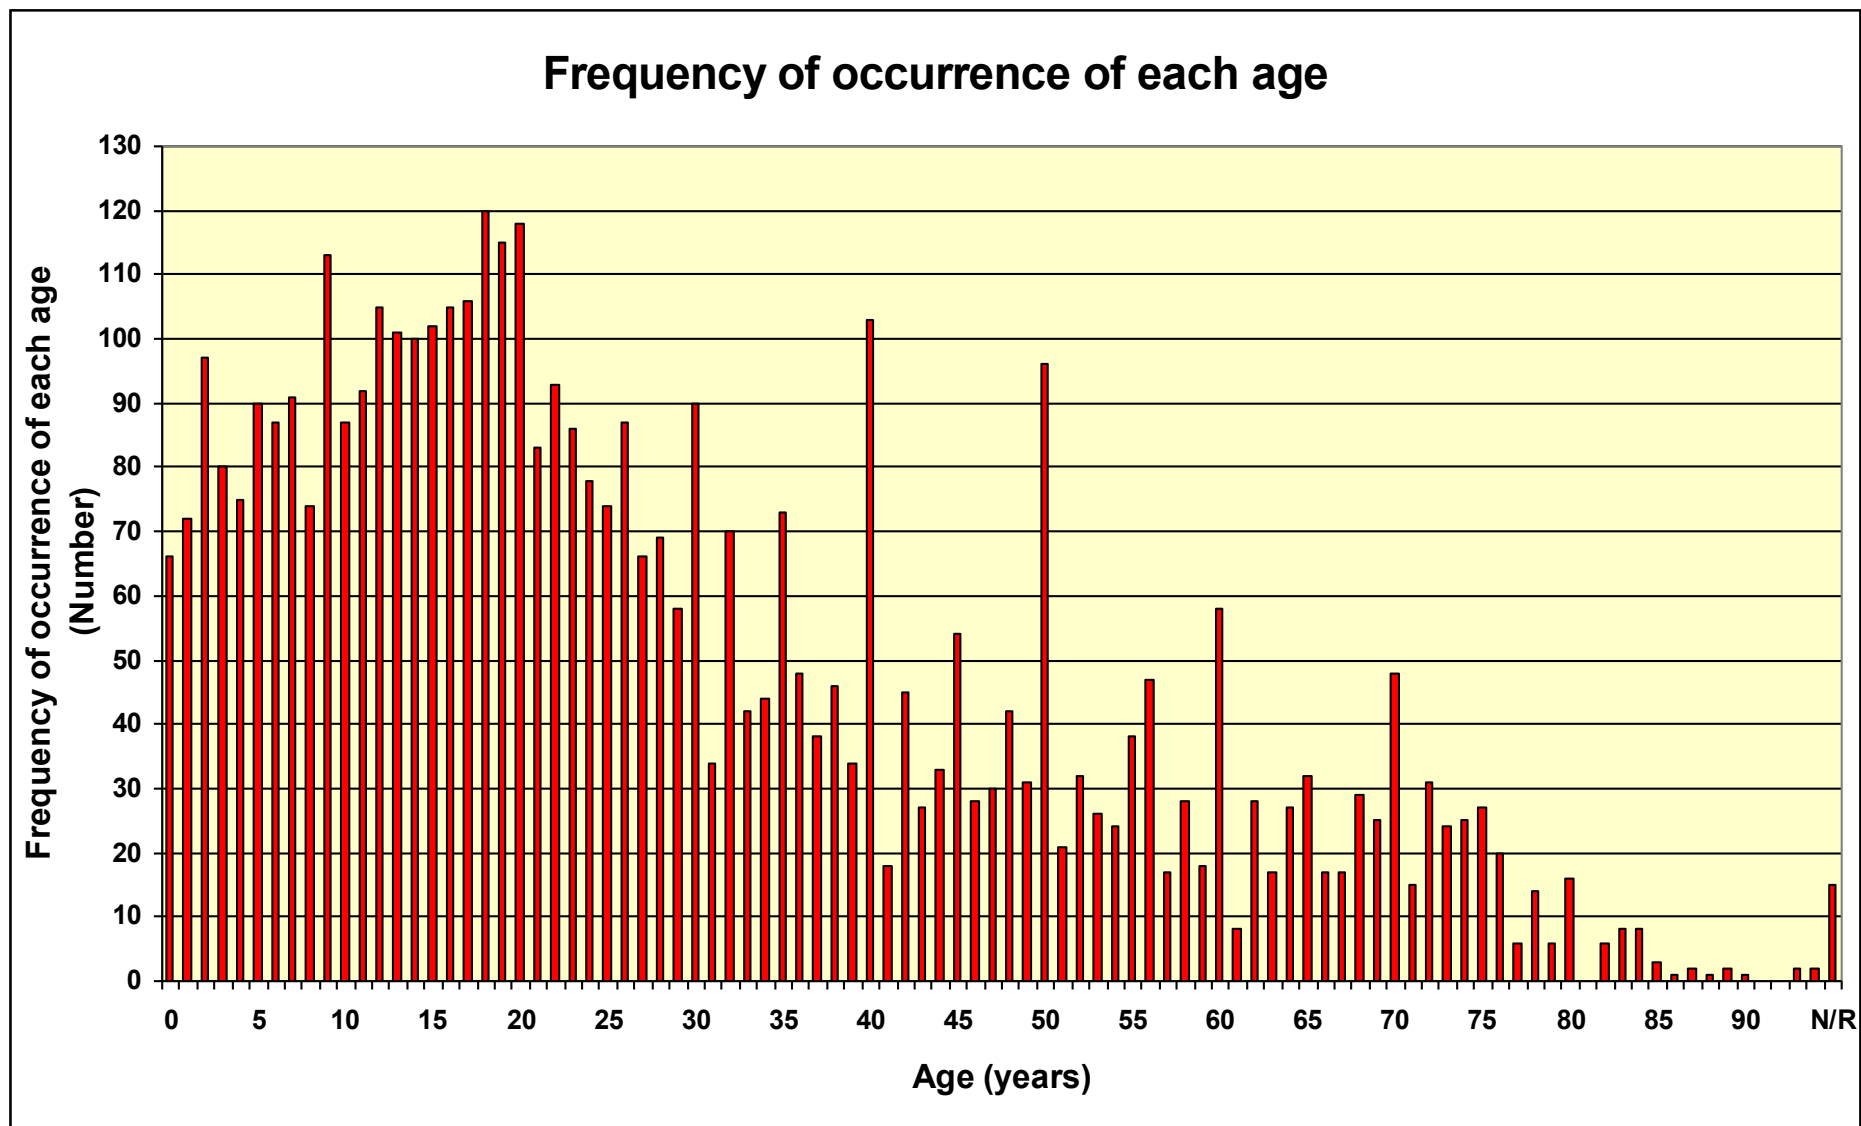

Age v. Frequency of occurrence for each year

The age was left blank for 15 persons.

Looking at these numbers graphically

The above Table is graphically represented:

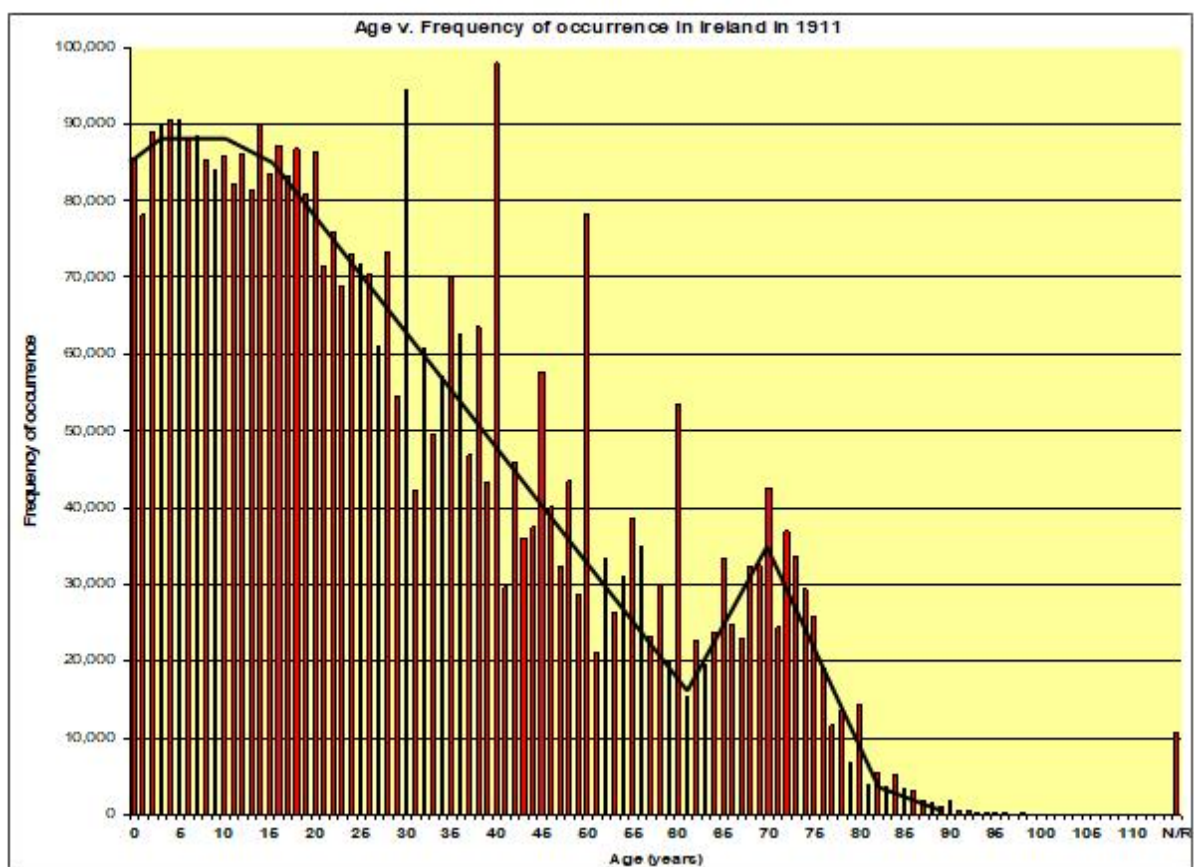

On the above chart we do observe the particularly large numbers who have their ages as 30, 40, 50, 60 or indeed 70 years.

To a lesser extent there are peaks with ages ending in 5, e.g. 35, 45, 55.

It would seem that ages were often rounded, or maybe estimated!

Looking at the above type data nationally and summarised on the following chart we again see the striking highs for the decades and not as pronounced for the 5's. The decreasing trend of numbers living versus age changed to increasing ages from the aged about 60 to aged 72 and decreasing again to aged 80 to meet the earlier decreasing trendline. This is the heavy black line and this does clearly show the jump in the numbers of people living at aged 70 plus / minus about 9 years. In this I did ignore the spikes for aged 30, 40, 50 and 60 years. The Bantry chart does not have such a noticeable increase in ages in the 60 to 72 bracket as displayed nationally.
